Journal of Development & Communication Studies

Contents

A holistic framework for addressing ‘safe’ sexting challenges in Kenya

Simon Kihiu Chege, School of Information Communication Technology, Zetech University, Nairobi, Kenya. Email: simonchege08@gmail.com & Masibo Lumala, School of Information Sciences, Department of Communication Studies, Moi University, Nairobi, Kenya & Visiting Professor, Brian Lamb School of Communication, Purdue University, U.S.A. Email: masibo@gmail.com https://doi.org/10.4314/jdcs.v7i1-2.1 pp. 6-25

Engaging the disengaged: Examining the domestication of mobile telephony among older adults in Trans-Nzoia and Bungoma Counties in Western Kenya

Leah Jerop Komen, Daystar University, Nairobi, Kenya. Email: lkomen@daystar.ac.ke https://doi.org/10.4314/jdcs.v7i1-2.2 pp. 26-36

Perception of HIV/AIDS infection and its effect on condom use among the youth of Kenya’s Kibera Slum

Jeremiah M. Nganda, Leah Jerop Komen & Beatrice Mbogoh, Daystar University, Nairobi, Kenya. Corresponding author email: jeremynganda@gmail.com https://doi.org/10.4314/jdcs.v7i1-2.3 pp.37-47

Challenges Kenyan Television Journalists Face in Spotting Fake News

Kabucua John Mutugi, Nyakundi Nyamboga, & Nguri Matu, Moi University, Nairobi, Kenya. Corresponding author email: joekabucua@gmail.com https://doi.org/10.4314/jdcs.v7i1-2.4 pp. 48-69

Use of ICTS for socio-economic development of marginalised communities in rural areas: Proposals for establishment of sectoral Rural Entrepreneurial Networks
Prioritising employee-organisation relationships in non-profit organisations in Kenya: Antecedents, queries and contradictions

Julie Gathoni Gitau, Department of Strategic and Organisational Communication, Daystar University, & Stella Jerop Chebii, Department of Communication Studies, Moi University, Nairobi, Kenya. Corresponding author email: jmuraya@daystar.ac.ke

pp. 105-118
Featured books

“A very welcome addition to the literature on globalization of media and communication. What distinguishes this valuable collection is its focus on the global South.”  (Daya Thussu, author of International Communication: Continuity and Change, Professor of International Communication, Hong Kong Baptist University)

“This book offers a timely contribution to the understanding of the dynamics of global media representation and perception in a new era undermined by the unprecedented connectivity, both symbolically and physically, in human history. Instead of repeating a technically driven globalization illusion, this book offers a collection of wonderful works to map the diversity of localization in which technological adoption interacts with the changing cultural and social patterns... It is indeed an inspiring work for international communication research and practice across the globe.” (Deqiang Ji, Associate Professor at Communication University of China; Vice Chair, International Communication Section, IAMCR; Editor-in-chief, China Media Research)

“News reports about marginalized regions are often tilted to favor the political and economic interests of the news teller, but this book doesn’t apologize to the latter. Rather, it traces the historical and structural patterns of international news reporting and news consumption and provides recommendations for meaningful change.” (Jan Servaes, former UNESCO Chair of Communication for Sustainable Social Change).

“This is an excellent collection of studies that enhances our understanding of how global media influence societal perceptions of otherness. I recommend this volume for students and teachers of media literacy, media advocacy, social media and media effects… a good communication and media student’s companion.” (Levi Z. Manda, PhD. Editor, Journal of Development & Communication Studies).
Development theory and practice are often taught in a manner that strips them of their historical context and obscures alternative intellectual assumptions and critical frameworks. This prevents students from acquiring a holistic understanding of the world and consequently, when it comes to development practice, most lack the skills to live and engage with people. It has become crucial to properly consider what it means to conceive and implement participatory development out in the field and not just in the boardroom.

Building on the work of Robert Chambers and Arturo Escobar, Communicating Development with Communities is an empirically grounded critical reflection on how the development industry defines, imagines and constructs development at the implementation level.

Unpacking the dominant syntax in the theory and practice of development, the book advocates a move towards relational and indigenous models of living that celebrate local ontologies, spirituality, economies of solidarity and community-ness. It investigates how subaltern voices are produced and appropriated, and how well-meaning experts can easily become oppressors. The book propounds a pedagogy of listening as a pathway that offers a space for interest groups to collaboratively curate meaningful development with and alongside communities.

This is a valuable resource for academics and practitioners in the fields of Development Studies, Communication for Development, Communication for Social Change, Social Anthropology, Economic Development and Public Policy.

Why do some big and small organisations, businesses, media organisations, and, even, political parties, succeed while others fail spectacularly when the founding owners leave or die?

In his latest book, The Elephant in the House, Fr Dr Andrew Kaufa of Montfort Media, Malawi draws upon the fate of Catholic Church projects in the South Eastern Region to provide a clear-cut answer: Lack of embedment of succession plans in the management of the institutions. Fr Kaufa has put together a book that provides practical steps in setting up a succession and management plan for any firm or organisation.

The Elephant in the House is a must read and must use guide for all Micro, Small and Medium Enterprises (MSMEs), NGO, Church and family business owners, teachers, students of media management, and others grappling with succession and management issues.

Coming soon from Montfort Media, PO Box 280, Balaka, Malawi. http://montfortmedia.org.mw